Ben Franklin Flat Barn

You can afford a new milking parlor with the Ben Franklin Series

"A penny saved is a penny earned."

You've always known that a modern milking parlor would let you milk with less fatigue and fewer people. Now, the Ben Franklin Series from D. L. George & Sons Mfg. can put a manual milking parlor in your present barn at a price so thrifty that even old Ben himself would approve.

You may save even more because you can probably install the milking parlor yourself. D. L. George & Sons Mfg.'s modular construction and detailed instructions are designed for easy installation (with either welding or bolting). Since the parlors are manually-operated (with no air compressor or hydraulic pump), you won't have to worry about expensive upgrades to your electrical service. And D. L. George & Sons Mfg.'s 12 gauge triple-coated galvanized square tubing, clear span design, and strong weld joints mean your stalls will still be rust-free and sturdy after years of heavy use.

Flat barn walk through parlor

36'x20'
space required

The flat barn walk through style allows you to add a new parlor with the least construction cost because you usually can adapt your existing building and pipeline. And, flat barns are easily expandable as your operation grows.

Since this design has fewer corners for the cows to turn; they move through faster, as many as 8 turns per hour, so just one person can handle the milking. A flat barn also puts you in closer contact with your cows than a pit parlor, so you can detect heats or spot sick cows sooner.

The modified raised platform reduces the strain on your back too, so you'll feel better when the milking's done.
